“ I remember as I was growing up, “uncle Dave” was my partner in crime when it came to adventures in nature. You took me out in the woods to a pond and sat and fished with me, even took the fish off the hook because they grossed me out to touch them. I remember you telling Andrew about the basics of “snipe hunting” and he believed every word. I never imagined you would be gone this soon. The last few years I’ve been distracted with school and work so we didn’t spend much time together. I do cherish the random late night messages on Facebook, especially when I was just in the room next to you. You had a heart of gold and made everybody laugh as often as you possibly could. You taught the boys how to be boys and spoiled the girls. Rest In Peace, Uncle Dave. Love, “stick”.
