“Well Joe, it has been almost a year since you left this world. I talk to you everyday, think about you everyday as well, the saying time heals all wounds is definitely not true! My heart aches everyday, I just can't get over losing you! You have missed so much here, and it was felt, the kids ask where is Uncle JoJo? I miss our talks, and your smile. I don't feel the same anymore, I think that a lot of my joy left with you. Your babies have gotten so big, Summer is so beautiful and smart, CJ looks just like you, and acts like you too... lol I love you brother and will see you soon. Your Brother Jeff”

“The Reality is I will grieve forever, I will not get over the loss of you my sweet brother; I will learn to live with it. I will try to heal and rebuild myself around the loss we have suffered. I will never be whole again, and I will never be the same again. And the the truth is I don't want to. "what was it like to lose him" asked sorrow. There was a long pause before I could respond: It was like hearing every goodbye said to me- said all at once. My sweet brother I will keep our memories and you in my heart, and in my heart you shall stay until we meet again. Rest In Peace Love your brother Jeff.”

“So sorry for your loss. Jeff, you really expressed it well. We never get over the grief of losing someone we love, but we can try to rebuild and remember the happy times and the love we shared. Leon and Dinah, I remember meeting you all with two young handsome boys years ago in Clintwood after my short teaching career. I think Leon was one of my students and I am not sure about Dinah. Praying for God to help you all through this sorrow. I love you all.”
