“Do you Remember Daddy Do you remember when we rode that big white horse , (in Richmond) it was so big I could not get my little legs around it, but you held me tight, and the big black bull chasing us in the hay field you protected me, Do you remember when Anita Jane decided to walk 5 miles to see her boyfriend through the woods, dragging us all alone and you had to hunt us up. Boy you were mad lol Do you remember when we moved home to the mountains , in that old truck , full of all our belongings and five ratty little girls, must of look like the clumpette's coming to town. lol Do you remember all the ghost stories by the campfire , sometimes you would run off and leave us just for fun, and other time you would hold us close . Thank you daddy Do you Remember ... The first time I got caught kissing a boy beside the house . boy that switch Hurt .. Thank you Daddy ! Thank you for always being there , You were the best Daddy in the world . You tried to teach us for right and wrong, and did a good job of it. Thank you for every little life lesson, you could give me. Thank you for always loving me, no matter what. I love you now and always, I will see you in Heaven.”
