“ It's been 7 years since you passed away, Dad. I still think of you often and wish I could call you and talk to you. I'm thinking about you on Father's Day today. I remember when me and Renee were young and you took us to Vance's Skateland. You put on a pair of rollerskates and lost control from going too fast and both of your arms were waving in the air in a futile attempt to stop. Fortunately, there was a trash can nearby to stop you in your tracks as it went down with you. I hope you got better at rollerskating in heaven and the trash cans are sturdier up there.

“ I remember my dad loving sci-fi and cheese wiz. We would play endless rounds of Uno and he taught me how to play spades. I know he tried to be the best father he could. I just hope he finds peace with himself in the afterlife.

“ "Rest in peace my good friend it is a shock to learn you have been called home to the Lord. Vinney and I go back along way. We were best friends in the Marine Corps. we lived together in a tiny little apartment in Iwakuni, Japan for awhile and even got married, to what we thought were our sweethearts for life, on the same day down in Fukuoka, Japan at the consulate. He was my best man and I was his. His ex-wife and my ex-wife grew up together in Iwakuni. I guess they weren't our sweethearts for life... Anyway i was thinking about you the other day and decided to look you up and say hi. found out you passed so i guess I will have to say hi when I see ya again. Oorah Sgt Marnati"

“Vinney is greatly missed by all of us here at Buck Oil Company. We think of him as our beloved friend and business partner and not just someone we work with. Vinney played a very important role in our operation here in St. Paul and throughout our marketing area in North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee and all of Southwest Virginia. He started working here as a driver in 2003 and received recognition for safety, and performance throughout his career. He was promoted last year to Warehouse Manager which seemed like the job that was custom made for him. He did a great job. We hope the best for all of his family.”
